SEEING GOD'S WORD
THROUGH CALVARY-COLORED GLASSES.

Coterminous is a book about seeing all of life and scripture through the Person and Work of Christ.

The word “coterminous” means sharing the same boundary or extent, and the book uses that idea to show how God’s truth runs seamlessly across time—from the Old Testament, through the Cross, and into our lives today. Rather than approaching theology as an academic exercise, it invites readers to put on what the author calls Calvary-colored glasses, letting scripture interpret scripture and keeping Christ at the center of every doctrine; what the author deems as the basis of true exegesis.

Each chapter is built around an “Awareness,” exploring themes like justification, sanctification, redemption, the Blood of Christ, and the believer’s eternal security. By highlighting contrasts such as fall from versus formed of, and by drawing from the preserved Word of God in the King James Bible, the book aims to deepen our awareness of grace and sharpen our discernment.

At its heart, Coterminous calls us to rest in Christ’s finished work, to grow in faith, and to recognize that all truth and life ultimately converge in Him.
